For more btan a century the breeding of canaries has been a thriving industry in parts of Germany. In 1850 the German dealers began to ship the birds to New York, and then to South America and Australia. The profits are small. but the industry is a godsend to the poor who make the small wooden cages. It is estimated that about 250,000 canary birds are raised every year in Germany. The most important market is the United States, which takes about 100,000 birds per annum. When the birds are shipped to this country they are always accompanied by an attendant. On the return voyage these attendants take American birds and animals to Europe.
